The theme for this spring is collaboration and networking. An outstanding example is the dedicated effort by members of the Friends of the Beach Museum of Art Board to raise funds to invite photographer Pete Souza to give a talk at Kansas State University in conjunction with the exhibition Pete Souza: Two Presidents, One Photographer, February 5-April 27, 2019. Souza is scheduled to speak at McCain Auditorium March 5. A Kansas State University alumnus, Souza served as the official White House photographer for Ronald Reagan and Barack Obama. Both presidents are insightfully and affectionately portrayed in the exhibition. I hope it is an opportunity to celebrate democracy’s capacity to embrace differing strategies and implement American ideals.

A very different network has come out of the museum’s Silk Road through Kansas theme initiated last fall. The current Mary Holton Seaton Gallery installation, Voices: Art Linking Asia and the West, with works of art from the permanent collection, is the product of a collaboration between Curator Aileen June Wang and scholars and graduate students from across our region. Other institutions are carrying the Silk Road banner with programs about East-West exchanges in culture, including the Spencer Museum of Art at the University of Kansas in Lawrence; the Mulvane Art Museum at Washburn University Museum in Topeka; the Birger Sandzén Memorial Gallery in Lindsborg; and the Ulrich Museum of Art at Wichita State University. (For more information, see the website of each museum.) Beach Museum of Art staff are proud to have catalyzed this series of public programs and exhibitions around the state.

Service sometimes takes the form of leadership. The Marianna Kistler Beach Museum of Art staff was ready, willing, and able to take this role and is proud to steward its rich collection to support this level of public scholarship.

Pete Souza: Two Presidents, One Photographer
February 5 – April 27, 2019, John F. Helm Jr. Gallery

The iconic photographs of Pete Souza are well known from his tenure as chief official White House photographer for President Barack Obama. Many people don’t remember that Souza was also official White House photographer for President Ronald Reagan.

Two Presidents, One Photographer showcases 56 of Souza’s photographs of two presidents. It includes Souza’s favorite images of Reagan and Obama, providing us with candid moments that are windows into their humanity. What we see in Souza’s photographs are two presidents who clearly respected the office they held and the people with whom they interacted, no matter the circumstance.

Souza earned a master’s degree in journalism at Kansas State University. He is currently a freelance photographer in the Washington, D.C., area and professor emeritus of visual communication at Ohio University.

White House photographs by Pete Souza. This exhibition was organized by art2art Circulating Exhibitions. The exhibition is sponsored by the Kansas State University Office of the President, Mary Vanier, Jackie Hartman Borck and Lee Borck, Jack Goldstein Charitable Trust, Holiday Inn at the Campus, K-State Department of Art, and other generous donors.

Franklin D. Roosevelt’s jobs programs for artists during the 1930s and 1940s introduced a golden age for murals in America. New Deal artists took inspiration from the panels of the Mexican muralists, in which various ethnic groups and the everyday worker became monumental “heroes.” Farmers, miners, American Indians, settlers, all found places in the government murals that still greet visitors in sites such as post offices and schools.

This exhibition of over 50 drawings explores the themes that emerged in American mural making from the Great Depression until after World War II. Artists featured include Anton Refregier, Jenne Magafan, Edward Chávez, and Arnold Blanch.

The exhibition provides an intimate look at the thinking processes of these artists and others who competed for New Deal mural commissions. Colorful and dynamic preliminary studies offer insights into artists’ thoughts about interpreting history, the notion of “hero,” and democratic ideals — topics still relevant today.

This exhibition has been organized by the Frances Lehman Loeb Art Center of Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, New York.

Works from the museum’s collection include Roger Shimomura’s Martin Cheng: Painter and Fisherman (1991) and Margo Kren’s Fan of Cheese and Sausage Pizza (2005). Also featured in the exhibition is a textile painting from Kansas State University’s Historic Costume and Textile Museum: a Chinese depiction of the Nativity, perhaps from the 19th century, fusing Chinese landscape painting traditions and Christian subject matter. This exhibition is a collaboration between Curator Aileen June Wang and University of Kansas Art History Professors Sherry Fowler and Maki Kaneko.

Beyond Gravity: Selections from the Permanent Collection
April 2 – October 19, 2019, Ruth Ann Wefald Gallery

Apollo 11 mission commander Neil Armstrong and pilot Buzz Aldrin, both Americans, landed the lunar module Eagle on July 20, 1969. This exhibition celebrates the 50th anniversary of the Apollo moon landing and complements the Manhattan Public Library’s summer reading theme, A Universe of Stories.

The signature work, Moon Landing, is by artist and designer Raymond Loewy, who worked for NASA from 1967 to 1973. Loewy was employed as a Habitability Consultant by NASA when it designed the Skylab space station, launched in 1973. One of NASA’s goals in hiring Loewy was to improve the safety and comfort of manned spacecraft.

Another body of work featured in the exhibition is by Indian artist Rm. Palaniappan. “During my schooling, interest on science made me imagine myself as a scientist,” the artist has said. “(A)lso my deep involvement in mathematics and astronomy gave me a doorway to see a new world of abstractions.” Palaniappan’s Alien Planet series, Space Drawings, and Flying Man all reflect his fascination with flight and space exploration.

From John Steuart Curry’s illustration study for a Ralph Waldo Emerson essay to Wisconsin engineer Erhardt C. Koerper’s Sun Flares to Lee Chesney’s Nebula, this exhibition invites viewers to travel beyond gravity’s reach.

Talk by Kevin Willmott, co-writer with Spike Lee of the film BlacKkKlansman
Bluemont Room, Kansas State University Student Union

Acclaimed Kansas-based filmmaker Kevin Willmott co-wrote the film BlacKkKlansman with director Spike Lee. In this talk Willmott will discuss how the film explores and exemplifies the rise of racism, Charlottesville, the Muslim travel ban, and the government shutdown over funding for the wall. Willmott’s films often reflect elements that currently define life in the USA. His insightful use of humor adds precision to his critiques, and at the same time affirms our humanity in the face of hatred. The film is based on the true story of (and book by) Ron Stallworth, a young African American police officer who infiltrated a cell of the Ku Klux Klan in Colorado Springs, Colorado in the late 1970s.

This talk will serve as a keynote for “The Art of Democracy”, a symposium co-organized by the Office of the Provost and the Center for Engagement and Community Development. SPONSOR AND DONOR SPOTLIGHT

The Greater Manhattan Community Foundation’s Lincoln & Dorothy Deihl Community Grant Program has once again made possible a museum exhibition and programming that aim to enrich our community. Following its support in 2017 of Fronteras/Frontiers, the Deihl Foundation provided significant funding for the museum’s fall 2018 exhibition Culture Mixmaster Zhang Hongtu and its related public programs. Thanks to this support, internationally renowned artist Zhang Hongtu was able to engage the public during a 10-day residency. The exhibition, displayed in three of the museum’s galleries, drew significant attention from area educators and media outlets.

Another exhibition benefitting from philanthropy is Picturing Kansas, on view until June 1, 2019. Dan and Beth Bird, dedicated K-State boosters and art lovers, made a generous gift in support of this Vanier Gallery installation drawn from the museum’s permanent collection. Charles and Sandra Bussing also supported the exhibition. Picturing Kansas includes depictions of the Kansas landscape by artists from the late-19th century to the present. The exhibition especially serves a recurring school tour program connected to elementary school curriculum. The Riley County History Museum often serves as a program partner.

Kansas State University Confucius Institute has been a significant sponsor of Silk Road through Kansas exhibitions and public programs. These programs explore the many ways ideas and aesthetics from Asian cultures have informed artists in our region. Neighboring museums have responded by organizing their own displays and programs related to the Silk Road theme, resulting in a unique route of cultural trade and exchange throughout the state. Look for the Silk Road logo next to program descriptions in the calendar of events.

Funding from the Caroline Peine Charitable Trusts/The Manhattan Fund Bank of America N.A. Trustee has allowed the museum to purchase technology to expand educational programming for audiences of all ages. Projects include audio-visual equipment for the classroom, technology for outreach programs for adults and children, and digital cameras to support the Young Artists summer art program.

Weary Family Foundation funding is enabling badly needed upgrades to presentation technology in the UMB Theater and for purchase of equipment related to collection access and exhibition design. We are especially grateful for the foundation’s recognition of behind-the-scenes needs related to the museum’s mission.
KUDOS AND UPDATES

SMARTIFY

As an institution with a mission to bring people and art closer together, the Beach Museum of Art initiated a partnership with Smartify, a U.K.-registered community interest company whose stated goal is “to help people make meaningful connections with art and to support arts organizations with audience reach and financial resilience.” The company developed an app for smartphones called Smartify. This app uses visual recognition software to allow museum visitors to scan artwork and get more information about it. Anyone can download the app for free.

To use the app, open it and point the camera on your phone at an artwork that bears the Smartify logo on its wall label. A digital label will pop up with information about the artist and the object.

As the digital assets assistant this year, it has been rewarding to do research on artworks in the museum’s collections for Smartify. I hope this tool will give museum visitors the best experience possible. Next time you’re at the museum, download and check out Smartify.

— John Harwick, Digital Assets Assistant

Farewell to John Steuart Curry Mural

The museum recently said farewell to the Wall Map of Europe by John Steuart Curry. The mural, on loan from the Burr Living Trust, was one of the first murals the prominent American Regionalist from Kansas completed during his career. The oversized canvas required special packing and transportation to ensure its safe travel back to the East Coast.

K-State Students Produce “The Curry Illustrations Project” Website

John Steuart Curry is better known as a painter of Kansas scenes than as an illustrator of magazines and books. While studying art in Chicago as a young man, Curry declared his interest in becoming an illustrator to his parents and set off to work with established illustrator Harvey Dunn in New Jersey. Between 1921 and 1928, Curry produced dozens of pictures for serialized dramas published in magazines such as The Saturday Evening Post and Boys’ Life.

In the early 1940s, Curry began illustrating editions of classic books, including James Fenimore Cooper’s The Prairie, Walt Whitman’s Leaves of Grass, and Mary O’Hara’s My Friend Flicka. The museum holds several hundred Curry sketches for these and other World War II-era publications.

The museum has formally launched “The Curry Illustrations Project,” a digital humanities website related to Curry’s 1940s illustration work. The project emerged from a spring 2018 art department credit course taught by Curator Liz Seaton with assistance from Digital Assets Assistant J.P. Harwick and Registrars Sarah Price and Theresa Ketterer. English Professor Mark Crosby, director of K-State’s Digital Humanities Center, provided initial guidance for the course. Students in the course were Ben Ingle, Jenn Hudson, Hannah Lovell, Lacy Mann, Emily May, Nay Thomas, Sydney Tucker, and Andrew West.

We plan to add additional research and resources to the website. Explore it at thecurryillustrationsproject.wordpress.com.
Douglas Abdell’s Kreqe-Aekyad and Kqrefe-Aekyad became a part of K-State’s art collection in 1988 and were installed on the university grounds between Thompson and Nichols halls in 1989. Over the next 29 years, Kansas weather took its toll on the sculptures. Working with the artist, conservators at Russell-Marti Conservation Services in California, Missouri, have returned these minimalist sculptures to their original condition.

Conservators sandblasted the sculptures to remove old paint and rust. Next, they added braces to reinforce their bases. The artist supplied information about the type of paint he had used, and the sculptures were recoated. Once conservators completed their work, a crane was used to hoist the sculptures up and into the Stolzer Gallery, where they will be on view through 2019.
I recently spoke with Miki Loschky, gallery teacher in the museum’s education department, as she prepared to facilitate a program in the galleries. Hearing about her past work and experience, I learned how her interests relate to her current role at the museum. The questions and responses below are excerpted from our discussion.

– Jui Mhatre, Communications and Marketing Specialist

Before coming to work at the museum, was there a job or other experience that you feel prepared you well for this

Through my doctoral dissertation research on reading comprehension, I deepened my understanding of how learners process new information they are reading by making cognitive connections to their world knowledge, such as inferences. If you read “The artist is working on an armature” you can infer that the artist is a sculptor (if you know what “an armature” is). I think this is very similar to how viewers interpret artworks. Viewers must use their knowledge of art history to connect artist Zhang Hongtu’s Self-Portrait in the Style of the Old Masters to Da Vinci’s Mona Lisa and Picasso’s Cubist paintings. I keep that in mind when I design materials for freshman seminars each year at the museum. In addition, my bilingual background in English and Japanese has enabled me to facilitate cross-cultural events such as leading the Facebook live Q&A for Enrico Isamu Oyama’s Ubiquitous exhibition (2017) and translating the related catalogue (2018).

What recent project has been satisfying for you personally and why?

In Silk Road through Kansas programs, I have been able to engage a wide range of learners in exploring the ideas of cultural hybridity and globalization through a variety of activities. This includes creating infographics, matching Zhang’s paintings with Van Gogh and Cézanne’s paintings, playing the Silk Road trading game, and creating East-West collages and sumi ink paintings. I felt that the learners could think critically, such as making logical inferences and drawing conclusions from their observations. I also felt that the learners raised their awareness of how art can embody the cultural exchange between East and West, combining the best of both worlds.

Is there an upcoming program or exhibition at the museum to which you especially look forward?

I’m really looking forward to Pete Souza’s exhibition, Two Presidents, One Photographer starting February 5 and his talk on March 5. I would like to see and hear about how Souza captured the past presidents (Reagan and Obama) who honored the office of the commander-in-chief and those who worked for them, regardless of the differences in their political stances. One of the most rewarding aspects of my job here at the museum is to be able to interact with world-class artists such as Pete Souza, Zhang Hongtu, and Enrico Isamu Oyama, which enriches my life as an educator and an individual.
I am looking forward to all the excitement that lies ahead for the Marianna Kistler Beach Museum of Art in 2019. A new year gives us the opportunity to evaluate where we have been and where we are going, and to set new goals for the upcoming year. I am one of those people who likes to make resolutions for the New Year and perhaps you and our other Friends of the Beach Museum of Art, are as well.

While you are considering your goals for 2019, I'd like to suggest a few possibilities that include the Beach Museum of Art:

• Commit to bringing a friend (or two!) with you to the museum this year.
• Attend an opening for one of our exhibitions.
• Try out our new app, Smartify (available for iOS and Android), on your next visit. Smartify allows you to scan an artwork and access a wealth of information.
• Share your enthusiasm about the Beach Museum of Art with friends and followers on social media.
• Consider volunteering to be a Friends Advisor. We have been working diligently since this past fall to coordinate a visit and talk by Pete Souza, an American photojournalist and former White House photographer for Presidents Ronald Reagan and Barack Obama. Souza’s photography of both presidents will be on display at the museum February 5-April 27, 2019. I want to thank the Souza Committee members for their hard work preparing for this exciting event, especially Committee Chairs Anne de Noble and Barbara Gatewood.

This fall the Beach Museum of Art also held its second annual Art in Motion event. This celebration of art kicked off the Silk Road through Kansas program series and featured, among other activities, a modified ping-pong tournament on a conceptual artwork by New York artist Zhang Hongtu, musical performances, and hands-on art projects for visitors of all ages.

The incredible staff at the Beach Museum of Art is dedicated to bringing the arts to life for the Manhattan community. It has been an honor to work with them, as well as the Friends of the Beach Museum of Art Board and Advisors, during my tenure as president of the Friends Board. I look forward to seeing you at the museum in 2019!
